"Should you ask me why this dunning, Why these sad complaints and murmurs, Murnaurs loud about delinquents Who have read the paper weekly, Read what they have never paid for, Read with pleasure and with profit, Read of news both home and foreign, Read the essays and the poems, Full of wisdom and instruction; Should you ask us why this dunning, We should answer, we should tell you, From the printer, from the mailer, From the prompt old paper-maker, From the landlord, from the carrier, From the man who taxes letters With a stamp from Uncle Samuel-Uncle Sam the rowdies call him-From them all there comes a message,

Message kind, but firmly spoken, 'Please to pay us what you owe us.' Sad it is to hear such message When our funds are all exhausted; When the last bank-note has left us, When the gold coin all has vanished, Gone to pay the paper-maker, Gone to pay the toiling printer, Gone to pay the landlord tribute, Gone to pay the active carrier, Gone to pay the faithful mailer, Gone to pay old Uncle Samuel-Uncle Sam the rowdies call him-Gone to pay the Western paper Three and twenty hundred dollars! Sad it is to turn our ledger, Turn the leaves of this old ledger, Turn and see what sums are due us, Due for volumes long since ended, Due for years of pleasant reading, Due for years of toilsome labor, Due despite our patient waiting, Due despite our constant dunning Due in sums from two to twenty.

Would you lift a burden from us? Would you drive a spectre from you? Would you taste a pleasant slumber? Would you have a quiet conscience: Would you read a paper paid for? Send us money, send us money, Send us money, send us money, SEND THE MONEY THAT YOU OWE US!"

The Emperor, who possesses a fine, erect, and stately figure, marched with a measured stride, and bowed right and left as he passed down the estrade. The Empress followed behind him, under the same dais, with thirteen ladies of honor around her, and her appearance was the signal for repeated outbursts of cheering. A platoon of the Chevalier Gardes followed the dais, and after them came a member of each family of the high Russian nobility three and three. The flourishing of trumpets, the strains of the numerous bands, the cheers of the people, the measured hurras of the soldiery, the roll of drums, the clang of bells, deafened the ears and almost overwhelmed the senses. The metropolitans of Mescow and Novgorod, who had previously blessed and watered the Imperial Ensign, stood at the door of the Cathedral of the Assumption, and as their Majesties approached, the former presented the Holv Rood to kiss, which they did most reverently, and the latter sprinkled them with holy water. THE CEREMONY.

We are now inside the cathedral with them, and results. are about to witness a ceremony instinct with meaning and full of sacred solemnity to the mind of the unsophisticated Russian. The Empress now approaches with a meek yet dignified air, and falls on her knees before the Emperor. His Majesty, lifting the crown from is then brought, which the Emperor places on the the Mistress of the Robes, and His Majesty having invested his bride with the Imperial mantle, draws her toward him and tenderly embraces her. This is CLOTHING.
SEERSUCKER COATS, the signal for the whole Imperial family, with the foreign princes, to approach and congratulate their Majesties, and nothing can be more touching than the spectacle. There is scarcely a dry eye among the masses crowded in the church, while the feeble frame of the Empress-Mother totters with outstretched arms toward the Imperial son, and passionately clasps and holds him in a long embrace; and tears and smiles mingle together as the little Grand Dukes are seen to clamber up to the side of their father and uncle, who has to stoop low in order to reach the little faces which ask to be kissed. But the most important and solemn part of the ceremony has now to be performed, and there is a general stillness in the church as the Emperor descends from his throne and proceeds to the entrance of the chancel. He is met there by the Archbishop of Moscow, who holds in his hands the sacred vessel which contains the holy oil. Stretching forth his right hand, the venerable father takes a golden branch, with which, having dipped it in the consecrated oil, he anoints the forehead, eyelids, nostrils, ears, hands and breast of the Emperor, pronouncing the solemn words "Impressio doni Spiritus Sancti." The act is done, and Russian eyes look with awe upon the Ancinted of God, the Delegate of of His power, the High Priest of His Church, at once Emperor and Patriarch, consecrated and installed in Preserved green the high temporal and spiritual office. A salvo of cannons, the bray of trumpets, the roll of drums, announce the completion of the sacred act to the cars of those who are without the church and cannot wit-

Meanwhile the Empress comes forward and is in like manner anointed by the Archbishop, but on the forehead only. Then the Emperor and Empress, the one on the right hand, the other on the left, of the presiding Archbishops of Moscow, St. Petersburg and Novgorod, receive the holy sacrament ; to the Emperor, as the chosen servant privileged by Heaven, it is administered in the two kinds, the Empress receiving only the sacramental bread, which is partaken of by all members of the Russian Church. Once more the choir burst out in full jubilant chorus, and their Majesties once more mount the platform on the throne, and stand erect while the Mass is intoned by the priests and the responses are intoned by the choir. The holy service being concluded, the Emperor steps from the throne, bows right and left to the great dignitaries of the State, to the prelates, to the reprerentatives of the foreign powers, and then leaves the church by the northern gate, accompanied by his splendid retinue, and followed at a short distance by the Empress.

THE BANQUET.

The throne room, in which the banquet takes place, the ceremony which has consecrated the Czar's power has been already described. The Emperor sits with in the eyes of so many millions of his subjects. It the Empress Mother on his right hand, and the was performed with rare precision and success, and young Empress on his left.
